DESCRIPTION:

The Shane Building is a two-story red brick building designed in the Renaissance Revival style. The brick coursing alternates stringer and header courses. The brick is light- and dark-rose color. A band of terra cotta caps the building's stepped parapet wall, with a pedimented section on the east wall signifying the entrance below. Outset brick pilaster-like columns divide the facade into bays with two second-story windows each. The windows are one-over-one double-hung sash on the north and east facades. The main entrance of the building is surrounded by a terra cotta entablature with lion heads and a heraldic shield. The complex cornice has denticulations with impressed stars. Terra cotta bands outline the second story and form window sills. Storefronts on both exposures have been remodeled.

SIGNIFICANCE:

The Shane Building is architecturally significant as a local example of the terra cotta-decorated commercial buildings of the 1910s and 1920s that drew primarily on Renaissance Revival motifs. This building and the Kress Building represent this use of terra cotta in Idaho Falls, the latter representing the use of terra cotta to form an entire glazed veneer. The Shane Building was built circa 1915. Early uses of the building included a grocery, a furniture store, and offices.
